A Day to Remember

Jayden's father loves to read. He reads magazines and newspapers. He watches television programs. Jayden's father likes to know what is happening in the world. He reads several news magazines. He reads the local newspaper to learn about his city and state. He watches television news shows to learn about what is going on in his country and in other countries.

Mr. Kay told Jayden that he learned a lot by keeping up with the news. He said that Jayden should try to learn to read the news, too.

Jayden tried to read the news. It was very hard. There were so many big words. Jayden could read some words. His father helped him read the rest. The names of other countries were very hard.

One news article was about the president-to-be. Jayden learned that there is an election every four years to choose a president. He learned that the president-to-be isn't really the president until January 20. January 20 is called Inauguration Day.

Mr. Kay and Jayden watched television together on January 20. It was very exciting. All kinds of things started to happen about lunchtime. There was a tour of Washington, D.C. There were interviews with people in the government. There were stories about the family of the president-to-be.

Jayden's father told him it was important to listen carefully to the people on television. Each inauguration day was a part of history. Millions of people had voted for the president-to-be.

Then it was almost time for the inauguration. There were thousands of people at the place for the inauguration. Most of them were very happy.

At last they got to see the president-to-be. She said some words and promised to protect the country the best she could. And then she was the president! She gave a long speech. Jayden tried hard to listen, but he did not understand all of the speech. When the president finished her speech, there was a lot of clapping and shaking hands.

Name: _____

After the inauguration, the president led a long, exciting parade. There were many bands and lots of music. When the parade was over, there were many parties for the president and her family.

It was quite a day! Jayden got to see the inauguration. Now he knew why his dad loved reading and listening to the news.
