Shutta Crum, Storyteller

By Brandi Waters

Telling stories is in Shutta Crum's blood. It has always been a big part of her life. It is no wonder that she became an author.

Shutta Crum was born in Kentucky. She got her odd name from her father. His nickname was "Shuddy." Shutta's family lived in a small town in the mountains. There, telling stories was a way of life. Everyone had a story to tell. The best stories were the ones that stretched the truth just a little bit. Some people call those stories tall tales. Other people just call them whoppers! Shutta Crum spent many nights as a young girl listening to these stories. She always listened to them while clutching her father's legs. The stories were a bit scary. Holding onto her dad made her feel safe.

Most of the stories that Shutta heard were told from memory. Her family didn't have many books. It wasn't that they didn't like them. The books that they had were very special to them. Books were just harder to find because they lived in a small town.

Just before Shutta Crum started school, her family moved. Her dad got a job in Michigan. He went there to work in the car factories. The family lived in a house near Shutta's school. Shutta spent many hours in the school's library. She loved the library. It was almost like a second home. When Shutta wasn't at school or in the library, she liked to pretend she was there. She played "School." She also played "Library." She had so much fun that she never wanted to stop! She grew up and became a teacher and a librarian.

Shutta Crum loved her job as a librarian. She had so much fun! One of the best parts of her job was leading story time. She loved gathering kids around her and telling stories. She used funny voices and waved her arms. It was as much fun for her as it was for the kids! Sharing stories with kids made her want to be a writer. Shutta had always enjoyed writing. She wrote her first stories and poems in grade school.

Shutta didn't really try to write stories until she was older. Once she got started, things happened fast! She sold six stories in just over a year's time. After that, it kept getting better. In 2005, she was even invited to read a book at the White House! Storytelling, it's what Shutta Crum was meant to do.
