Name: _____

We all think and feel every day, so what characters think and feel in a story helps readers understand them! Characters seem much more real when their thoughts and feelings are expressed in first-person because then the reader really gets into their heads and hearts. Let's jot down some thoughts and feelings for your story character just for fun…and to help you write a more believable story.

What does your character like to think about often? What interests your character?

_____

_____

_____

What does your character have strong feelings about? How does your character express these feelings?

_____

_____

_____

Using complete sentences in the first-person, describe a situation where your character might express these thoughts and feelings.

_____

_____

_____

Name: _____

_____

_____

_____

_____

Draw an illustration of the situation you described above: